What kind of sweet treats would you like to see on a cooking website?

- eclairs
Cupcakes
- Kyley would like to see treats that are healthy and fruit based

How do you think a text to speech option would be useful?

- It would not be very useful
- It would be useful because you wouldn't be getting technology dirty and you would be saving yourself valuable time for something else you might be working on in your house or apartment.
- Kyley thinks it would be useful by allowing you to not accidentally make your device messy so it just reads the recipe to you

What kind of commands would you like to say to control a recipe if it's being read to you?

- "Bake for 10 seconds"
- "Stop listing ingredients in recipe" or "Continue listing ingredients in recipe"
- Kyley would want it to go in steps and for it to go forward, back, to pause, change its units for the amount its going to make, and for it to change how many of a tool it needs instead of the tool mentioned.

What kind of tools do you think would be useful to you personally on a cooking website that you might have not seen yet?

- I dont know
- A hamburger menu. This would be listing all of the meals and the ingredients they contain.

- Kyley would like to pair recipes to make a full meal like for example you can make cupcakes but then have it pair with a frosting recipe. Also to add a suggestion tool to tell it what ingredients you have to come up with recipes for the desired recipes.
